LAKOTA CARDINALS START BASKETBALL; AT MILTON TONIGHT

Team Composed of Practically all
New Players to Meet College
Five This Evening.

The Lakota Cardinals basketball team have organized for the coming winter months, after a layoff for over a year, and tonight they play their first game of the year with the Milton Cardinals at the latter's floor at Milton.

Only one former member of the Cardinal team will play this winter, from the present outlook. That man is John Brown, a guard, to be expected, however, that later in the season, some of the other material, that made the Lakota team a place of amusement on Saturday nights, by helping to form one of the best teams in the city, will be back.

George Callow, a former high school player, is to manage the squad this season. He has secured several valuable men, with whom he expects to make a good showing in basketball games. The team that will be sent to Milton tonight is as follows:

An attempt will be made to secure the attendance of this season, for the sole purpose of holding contests with some of the best teams in the country, basketball has always been a great sport in this city, and it is believed that once the Cardinals get started again, with a well-built team, that some more mighty interesting contests will be found staged during the next three or four months.

Proposed Improvements of $130,000 on Varsity Athletic Field Will Meet Opposition.

(Special to the Gazette.)

Madison, Wis., Dec. 14.—In spite of the action for improvement of the existing grounds of $130,000 on the athletic field of the University of Wisconsin, the plan is being met with serious opposition. The plan is to be presented to the legislature for approval. The board of regents is an item of nearly $130,000 to be expended in the construction of a new stadium at Wisconsin. According to reliable information the regents plan to ask for an appropriation of $65,000 for two

PROMOTERS TO FIGHT ANTI-BOXING LAWS

California Boxing Advocates to Carry
Law into Courts to Find Some Constitutional Loophole.

(By Hal Sheridan.)

New York, Dec. 14.—The anti-boxing statute of California is to go into effect tomorrow, or within a few days. Contrary to general belief, however, the promoters and backers have not begun to cry as yet. They are waiting until the legislature meets in January when they will take the law into the courts and look about to find some constitutional loophole.

Promoters McGarity and Conforth together with a whole flock of promoters of minor prominence are said to have made up a big purse for this new nearly completed law. The new law declared unconstitutional.

A contemporary remark, to wit: "If each wrestler is permitted to win New York under the law, it is fairly predicted that boxing will interest many persons who have been lukewarm over since the anti-boxing law was passed at Albany." It is certainly worth trying.

Twenty times as many cashiers, bookkeepers and collectors betting money belonging to their employers under the cash betting system.

Another look at these official National League averages and percentages again proves that Old Grandfather Dope is rapidly looking unkindly over his shoulder at the National League.

elbow as good for throwing purposes as ever. Thinking on the end of this misadventure in a hand, every finger of which is twisted and gnarled, and one of which is broken and dislocated so many times they look more like true roots than fingers.

Bill James, one-time Nap, who was shunted to the Pacific slope and later recovered by the St. Louis Browns, was the pitcher here of this morning's trip of the American and National league all-stars through the western states. All told 35 games were played. The Americans won 17, and the Nationals 18, while two games were ties. James won eight and lost three games, leading such stars as Grover Alexander, one of the best pitchers in the country; Bill Lewis, the Boston star who pitched in the recent world's series, and Willie Mitchell.

"Jimmy" Austin, the real live wire of the St. Louis club, and John Johnson, Bepko, Plank and company in the "Federal league. Just now "Jimmy" is pondering deeply over a domestic proposition placed before him recently by Jerry Schatz of the Buffalo Feds. "I want to play in the American league," says Austin, "but I must take care of myself. I'm satisfied with the financial end of the contract offered by St. Louis, but feel that I should not be an exception by having the ten days' clause remain in my contract. If the St. Louis club removes that, all right, he will, not, Jimmy stopped there, but his intentions were evident.

Poor Boston is in a pitiable condition as regards sport. All she has to represent her upon the gridiron are Haughton, Brickley, Mahan, Hardwick, Bradlee, Pennock and a few others who cannot help but make the All-American while baseball she has to be content with Stallings, Rudolph, Gowdy, James, Maraville, Evers and other has-beens. In addition to such cashers as Fred Stoen, Joe Hooper, Elmer Scott, Joe Wood, Leonard and Ray Collins.

In golf she cannot point to anyone better than Francis Ouimet and has to rely upon that ancient wreck of a boxer, Sam Langford, in the arena. When it came to rowing, she had to be satisfied with the Harvard crew taking off on a Monday. She should not get discouraged, however. Conditions may improve in another year and the Hub may again be heard from in the sporting world. But at present she must reconcile herself to her unfortunate lot.

Boston fans are now asking even money instead of offering odds that the Braves will win the 1915 National league pennant. Having learned that Babe Marquard had jumped the Feds, they feel that the Giants must be routed. The won 12 and lost 22 games this year.

George "Tex" Westcott, Brooklyn third baseman, writes from San Antonio, Tex., that he has not been playing and that he has been injured. He says he has been injured by a player named Westcott. Within the last few weeks Westcott's name has been coupled with a story of a weak knee which would make him a liability as a player and "Tex" wants the truth to prevail.

"Bob" Boscher has been playing professional football with the Oklahoma of Dayton. O. With Notre Dame Boscher was a gridiron star eight years ago, and in that position he has been successful this autumn. He has been successful in the league, but he has been unsuccessful in the league. He has been unsuccessful in the league, but he has been successful in the league.

DEBATE TRYOUTS TO BE FRIDAY EVENING?

Tentative Date for Preliminaries is Set.—Twelve Applicants for Teams
Already Prepare Talks.

Friday evening at seven-fifteen o'clock is the tentative date set for the debate preliminaries at the high school. Twelve teams to represent the Jansville high school in the Beloit College debating league will be picked alternates. At least a dozen students have applied for admission to the debating league, all of whom were granted a chance to try for the teams. Two trials will be selected this year, as has been the custom for the past several years.

The question as selected for the winter is as follows: Resolved, that the Parcel Post system be enlarged so as to include the express business. But five teams will be in the league this winter. Reports, having withdrawn after last season's activities.

Could Be Arranged.

A young woman with a party of Americans going through the parks and gardens of Warwick castle, England, lingered behind to admire the gorgeous peacock. "Do those birds ever drop any of their tail feathers?" she asked of a gardener who stood by. He looked around, lowered his voice, and replied: "They're bobbinets, miss, but they drop 'em heavy at the sight of a shillie."

Ecuador a Fertile Country.

Ecuador is rich in agricultural lands, but in very few cases are they worked to their full capacity; in fact, much of the most fertile land is not under cultivation at all. As is the case in other South American countries, the land is held in such large tracts that proper supervision and cultivation is not practicable.

Amusements

AT MYERS THEATRE.

Special arrangements are now completed for the appearance in Jansville of the Myers Theatre of the New York Grand Opera company. This great organization, which last season found that musical art lovers are in sufficient numbers in every section of the country to warrant the wide tour of this stellar company of artists, is to be heard in Jansville on Friday, Dec. 18th. This opera was selected after careful thought by the local management.

That local devotees of music may expect an extraordinary performance the names of the soloists in the cast should move them almost. The principal roles will be sung by Yvonne Darle, the most beautiful of all Carmens, formerly of the Opera Comique of Paris and known in all parts of the world for her wonderful and clever. Salvatore Giordano, the tenor whom Caruso has chosen as protegee; Richard Parks, late of Savage's English

"Jimmy" Austin, the real live wire of the St. Louis club, and John Johnson, Bepko, Plank and company in the "Federal league. MISS YVONNE DARLE

Then, the young and beautiful Carmen, the operatic star, who will appear at Myers Theatre next Friday evening.

Grand Opera company: Gustave Mevi, who created the part of "Rodolpho" with Bessie Abbott in "La Boheme"; Ruth Kusby, whose operatic concert work has won a national following; Ethel M. Peters, also widely known on the concert stage; Giorgio Galati, the celebrated baritone; Francis S. Parks, Miss Jessie Bruce, Charles E. Tinsbrock, and others equally well known.

In scenic portraiture the production is signally equipped and, with the exception of a large ballet—which only such permanent institutions as the Chicago and Metropolitan Operas can maintain—is more nearly complete in every detail of artistic fact than any road company hitherto organized.

Seats will go on sale Wednesday morning. The prices have been especially conceded by the management of the company, although, as the success of the season depends on Jansville, the management has been made to have the scholars at the state school, the management has been made to have the scholars at the state school.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

WHAT DO WE DO WITH IT?

"Whatever did people do when they wanted hot water in a hurry and didn't have a gas stove?" cried a little friend of mine the other day, as she stretched the boiling water of the gas stove on which she had placed the cold kettle five minutes before.

"They waited until their fires got hot enough to heat the water," said her white-haired mother serenely.

"But suppose they were in a terrible hurry?"

"They waited just the same," said the mother.

"I don't see how they ever stood it," said the young woman. "The gas doesn't seem any too quick to me."

RUTH CAMERON

I read somewhere the other day a complaint that the people of today haven't the patience, the self-control to wait serenely which the people of yesterday had.

Can you wonder at it? Virtues, like muscles, grow by exercise. Doubtless the woman of today who does some of her house work by proxy and some by electricity, does not have the same muscular arms as her grandmother who kept a big house immaculately clean and cooked for eight people without electricity, an accompanist or even a delicatessen shop to assist her. Likewise the younger woman does not have the same patience.

Personally I cannot see how people ever had the patience to write a letter and wait for the answer when then wanted to ask a friend in a neighboring town some simple question. Just think, they must have waited two or three days (perhaps more in the time before Uncle Sam's fast mail speed) for an answer that would have been obtained in two minutes over the telephone. And they probably waited much more patiently than we do when we have to wait a minute or two for a busy operator to respond, or for a ten minutes because the line is busy.

A friend of mine has some relatives who live in a near-by town which can only be reached on the trolley by spending an hour and a quarter and changing cars twice. Last year her husband bought an automobile in which he can take her across in minutes. Now her husband is away a great deal and she can't always have the machine, but she has been accustomed to it that it does not seem to her that she can possibly use the trolley. And when asked to visit in his absence, no matter how urgent the occasion, she says, "I can't, my husband is away with the automobile."

Of course no one regrets these short cuts even if they do make us impatient of the longer ways of doing things. But there is one question which always comes into my mind whenever I reflect on this fascinating though bromidic subject.

And that is—what do we do with the time we save?

Take all the time savers together—telephone, telegraph, automobile, electricity, gas, hardwood floors, apartments, cooking with a can opener, labor saving household devices, etc., etc.—we must save an enormous amount of time over our grandmother's schedule. Now what are we doing with it?

Money prices have gone up, but time prices have gone down. It is easier now to live on twenty-four hours a day than it was fifty years ago. What are we doing with this time surplus? Are we getting something worth-while out of it or not?

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

THINGS WORTH KNOWING.

To Make Wallpaper Stick—Scrape off all loose whitewash so wall is smooth, then wash with strong vinegar. When dry, cover wall with a paste or sizing made of cheap starch, real thin, in which put one-half teaspoon of dissolved glue to about eight quarts of the sizing. As soon as this is dry, you can put on your paper and it will stick. The vinegar and glue kill the lime in the whitewash.

Cleaning Lace Curtains, Etc.—Take about a half pound of starch, pulverize it and mix with an equal amount of borax. Toss garment to be cleaned in this powder, rubbing thoroughly spots showing most soil. Cover article to be cleaned with a black coat of starch and borax, wrap loosely in a clean paper and set aside in this manner for a few days. When needed, take outdoors and shake until powder is all out, then press garment with a warm iron. The starch will be clean white plumes, etc. When you have finished you will be surprised to see how dark the powder has become.

To Make Icing Like New—Dip a soft cloth in common vinegar, wash icing glass thoroughly, then polish with soft dry cloth until dry. This will make discolored and smoky icing glass as clear as crystal, so that the cheerful glow of the fire can be seen.

CHEAP PARTS OF A PIG.—Pigs' heads cost very little. There is a lot of nice meat on a pig's head and the meat may be used in just the same way as spareribs, which cost twice as much. Cooked with cabbage, pig's head makes a very good dish. Yellow turnips and potatoes cooked together with pig's head and then mashed are also good.

Pig neck bones are very reasonable in price. They may be used in the same way as spareribs, which cost twice as much.

Pig's knuckles cost about the same as spareribs, but they have more meat on them and may be used in the same way as spareribs.

All the above dishes are very nourishing. Remember that apples are now plentiful and cheap. Apple sauce, fried apples or baked apples, made with pork made a very wholesome, economical and dainty dish for all weather.

"GLASS" PICKLES.—"Glass" pickles are made from dill pickles which have become too soft to serve as dill pickles. They may even be so far gone as to have a disagreeable odor gone as to have a disagreeable odor.

Wash in cold water and cut in rings or slices. Put up to boil, according to amount of pickles you have, in following proportion: Three parts vinegar to one part water for every two quarts of pickles, two pounds sugar, two tablespoons spices. Let boil until it strings, then add pickles and boil five minutes. Ready to put in jars. The pickles become transparent and solid. Makes a very delicious relish.

THE TABLE.

Rabbit Potpie—Make a dough as for biscuits. Cook rabbit until tender, cool, pick from bones; crack bones and cook 20 minutes, then strain and make gravy. Add salt and pepper to good-sized potatoes, cut fine, and two onions. Mix all together, put in pie and bake 30 minutes.

Stable Dumplings (one recipe which may serve two persons): One cup sweet milk, pinch of salt, two cups flour sifted with four teaspoons baking powder. Mix well and drop by spoon into a pot of boiling water. Let cook for five minutes, then drain and let boil just 10 minutes without removing lid. Serve at once. (These are delicious with chicken.)

For a quick pudding: Use same recipe and bake in same way over potatoes, and serve with milk or cream. Beef Olives on Mock Duck—Have the butcher score a flank steak. Cut in five pieces. Make a dressing of bread crumbs, small onion, sage and one egg. Fill each piece and sew together with white thread. Put in pan with small piece of butter and just enough water to keep from burning. Cover and cook slowly two hours. When done, put on dish and draw out threads. Cover with gravy and serve.

Scalloped Sweet Potatoes—Boil six potatoes in well salted water until they are tender; skin them, slice thin and put a layer in buttered baking dish; sprinkle with brown sugar; put on more potatoes and more sugar till dish is full. Bake three-quarters of an hour.

OLD MAID IN HIGH TEMPER.—Do you mean that a girl will refuse to go with a young man who has gone to see this woman once? I cannot see why. If the young people are friends I should think they could talk over when I called on this empty-headed woman and so outwit her.

Evidently she is one of those women who are vain of their "power over men." What she needs is a good live interest in life. Empty-headed people must do something to create a sham interest in life, as they have no real one. She is to be pitied. She had no chance to do anything but hold no happiness for such women.

There's a wonderful difference in women," said Mr. Garland as he hit a fresh cigar and settled himself to enjoy it in the smoker.

"That so?" asked his companion. "I don't profess to be informed. I am only an outside observer, but it strikes me the differences are surprising."

"I had an experience that proved that beyond a doubt."

Mr. Garland relapsed into silence and sat looking out of the car window at the whirling snow flakes that settled in the dried grass and dead leaves.

"Go on with the story," said his companion, encouragingly.

"Oh, it's not much of a story," he answered, knocking the ashes of his cigar. "It was just a chunk of life. A year ago we had a stage of typhoid at our house. My wife, a son and a daughter were all down at once. We had a girl in the kitchen who had been with us over two years; a splendid worker, pleasant and capable. I thought the kitchen end of the business was in good hands.

I got a trained nurse, sent the youngest boy to his grandmother's and braced myself for the strain. There were only three people to eat, for of course the fever patients could not be counted. You can imagine I was bowled over when I found I had been run in debt $110 for living expenses the first month."

"See here, old man, you are arguing on my side," laughed the young man.

"Do you know," continued Mr. Garland, paying no attention to the levity, "that girl would have fish and roast the same day. She would load the table with all kinds of fresh fruit and open jelly and preserves in the bargain. You may imagine I was not very hungry, anxious as I was. If I had not been so worried about the sick, I had noticed the strain. The pace she had set. Of course I called a halt when the bills came in. Now that girl came of a poor family, had been used to nothing at home but the bare necessities, and she knew what my wife had been accustomed to have, naturally, having been there so long; but she was a spendthrift by nature and here was her first chance at a ring."

"All of which goes to prove my thesis, that they are all alike," chuckled the young fellow. "What did she do after you called a halt?"

"She had no chance to do anything, I did the ordering myself after that," answered Mr. Garland.

"Well, I got off at the next station," said the young man, putting on his overcoat.

"Goodby," said Mr. Garland shaking hands. "When you marry I hope you strike a woman like my wife, She can manage."

"I don't try holding your breath till I do it. I am afraid I'd strike a natural spendthrift," laughed his friend, shaking hands. "Goodby."

As sure to rise as the Sun

You can't always make everything "just so." Sometimes you will get in more shortening than usual; or make the batter a little thin; or it may not be convenient to put a cake in the oven the moment it is mixed; or your oven may not bake evenly and it is necessary to turn the pan around—none of these little uncertainties make the slightest difference in results if you use

K.G. BAKING POWDER

This modern, double-raise baking powder has unusual strength and is absolutely certain to raise your biscuits, cakes and pastry light and feathery. It generates an abundance of leavening gas both in the mixing bowl and in the oven. The raising is sustained until the dough is cooked through.

Housewives who use K.C. never have "bad luck" with their baking. Try K.C. at our risk. Your grocer will refund your money if you are not pleased in every way.

EVERYDAY TALKS

TO EVERYDAY PEOPLE

BY FRANCES JOYCE KENNEDY.

A western woman reader of this paper sends the recipes that are run in this space today. There need be no doubt as to their not being satisfactory, as she has tried them, every one.

genuine English Plum Pudding: One pound of seeded raisins, one pound of currants, one pound of chopped citron peel, one pound of chopped suet, four eggs, one cupful bread crumbs, two cupfuls of milk, two teaspoonfuls of salt, one pound of brown sugar, one teaspoonful of powdered cinnamon, two teaspoonfuls of powdered allspice, one-half teaspoonful of powdered cloves.

Thoroughly clean and dry the raisins and currants add to them one ounce of powdered cloves, and one grated nutmeg. Mix the butter and dough well together, working it in with the hands. Then take one pound of the dough, roll it on the baking board with a little flour, and cut off as much as will form a top crust for the bun. Then with the other part of the dough line a buttered cake tin. Now put the remaining dough into a large basin, add the fruit, almonds, peel, and spices and work well with the hands. Fill the tin neatly and after wetting the top edge of the dough with a little water, place on the top crust and prick over the top with a fork. Bake in a steady oven for four hours. To glaze the top, brush over, after taking from the oven, with beaten egg.

Scotch Currant Buns: Four pounds of bread dough, two pounds of seedless raisins, two pounds of currants, one half pound of butter, a quarter of a pound of blanched and chopped almonds, a quarter of a pound of candied orange peel, chopped fine, two ounces chopped citron peel, one ounce of powdered cinnamon, the same of powdered ginger, half an ounce of powdered allspice, a quarter of an ounce of powdered cloves, and one grated nutmeg. Mix the butter and dough well together, working it in with the hands. Then take one pound of the dough, roll it on the baking board with a little flour, and cut off as much as will form a top crust for the bun. Then with the other part of the dough line a buttered cake tin. Now put the remaining dough into a large basin, add the fruit, almonds, peel, and spices and work well with the hands. Fill the tin neatly and after wetting the top edge of the dough with a little water, place on the top crust and prick over the top with a fork. Bake in a steady oven for four hours. TESTIMONY OF SHOP GIRLS OF BIG CITY

Evidence Submitted to New York Commission Shows How Shop Girls Must Use Economy to Exist.

(By Carlton Ten Eyck.)

New York, Dec. 14.—"When I have to pay for a bun or a cake, I don't buy meat for weeks at a time."

This little sentence from the testimony of a girl clerk in a New York Department store is full of meaning. It is a reflection of "how the other half lives." It was told to the New York State Factory Investigating Committee Commission and was of many eye-opening statements, statements which brought home to many of Manhattan's citizens the fact that all the suffering in the world is not in Europe today.

You see yourself that the only thing left me to economize on is food," said another clerk, "I never eat my breakfast at all. By experience I found that was the easiest meal to do without."

One young woman of 31 years spent her vacation, one week every year, in her skylight bedroom—just one of those rooms which O'Henry described as resting up after a year's grind. But the pathetic note was added by the young woman when she said that she lived two or three days store every morning during her "vacation" to what some one else had not been given her job.

There was one girl who found ingenious way to buy new clothes she paid ten cents for her breakfast, 15 cents for her lunch and then 25 cents for a real banquet in the evening.

The testimony of two Buffalo women was interesting. One of them said that she lived two or three days on a diet of cold ham and a can of beans. Another, a young widow living in a questionable district, works for a wage of $6 a week clerking and has a little room in a lodging house not far from Buffalo's red light district.

The lights are not yet red where she lives but she said "the lights are getting pinker every year."

In a few cases the Salamander type of girl, the type made famous by a novelist of the day, exists among the shop-girls. But it is the Salamander who has gentleman friends not for the sake of the girl and the expensive luxuries but for the rare necessities.

Said one of them "Gee! But I feel sorry for the girls who haven't got a steady," she said. "Why! If I had to buy all my meals I'd never get along. Sunday dinner I always count on him for."

Well, the substance of the testimony was that State Factory Commission through its agents, Miss Esther Packard, Miss Mary Van Kleeck, Roswell Steel, Jr., Mrs. Marie Ornstein and others, showed that out of a total of 104,000 wage earners investigated by the Commission one-eighth earn less than $5 a week; one third less than $7; two-thirds receive $10 or less and only one-sixth make $15 or more. Half of the wage earners get less than $8 a week.

It does not make pleasant reading, this thought that a girl "omits" a meal or two a day to buy herself a coat to keep off the cold weather. But many of them do it.

Greatest Musical Nation.

To say of any one nation that it has "given us the best and most charming music" would be a rather hazardous statement. Italy has given us much fine music, and so has France, and Austria, and England, and even the United States. Perhaps Germany has the best claim to be called the leading musical nation. Certainly no other nation can show greater music than that which was composed by Beethoven, Mozart and other artists from the Fatherland.

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

THOUSANDS HAVE DISCOVERED DR. EDWARDS' OLIVE TABLETS ARE A HARMLESS SUBSTITUTE.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. They are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel. His efforts to banish it brought out these little olive-colored tablets.

These pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids.

It is best not to take calomel, but to let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Most headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "lousy" and "heavy." Note how they "clear" clouded brain and how they "perk up" the spirits. At 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

The CALL of the CUMBERLANDS

BY CHARLES NEVILLE BUCK
WITH ILLUSTRATIONS FROM PHOTOGRAPHS OF SCENES IN THE PLAY

"That 'hain't nothin' to talk over," stormed Aaron. "Ye're jest tryin' ter kill time till the boys gits hyar, and then I reckon ye 'lows ter have me kilt like yer're had me kilt them others. Hitt ain't no use. I've done sent 'em away. When they gits back hyar, either you'll be in hell, or I'll be on my way outen the mountings."

Samson stood rigid. Here was the confession of one murderer, with no denial from the other. The truce was off. Why should he wait? Cataracts seemed to thunder in his brain, and yet he stood there, his hand in his coat pocket, clutching the grip of a magazine pistol. Samson South the old, and Samson South the new were writhing in the life-and-death grapple of two codes. Then, before decision came, he heard a sharp report inside, and the heavy fall of a body to the floor.

A wildly excited figure came plunging through the door, and Samson's left hand swept out and seized its shoulder in a sudden vise grip.

"Do you know me?" he inquired, as the mountaineer pulled away and crouched back with startled surprise and vicious frenzy.

"No, damn ye! Git outen my road!" Aaron thrust his cocked rifle close against the stranger's face. From its muzzle came the awful stench of freshly burned powder. "Git outen my road afore I kilt ye!"

"My name is Samson South."

Before the astounded finger on the trigger could be crooked, Samson's pistol spoke from the pocket, and, as though in echo, the rifle blazed, a little too late and a shade too high, over his head, as the dead man's arms went up.

Except for those two reports there was no sound. Samson stood still, anticipating an uproar of alarm. Now he should doubtless have to pay with his life for both the deaths, which would inevitably and logically be attributed to his agency. But, strangely enough, no clamor arose. The shot inside had been muffled, and those outside, broken by the intervening store, did not arouse the house. Purry's bodyguard had been sent away by Hollis on a false alarm. Only the "women-folks" and children remained indoors, and they were drowning with a piano any sounds that might have come from without. That piano was the chief emblem of Purry's wealth. It represented the acme of "having things hung up;" that ancient and expressive phrase, which had come down from days when the pioneers' worldly condition was gauged by the bams hanging in the smokehouse and the peppers, tobacco and herbs strung high against the rafters.

Now Samson South stood looking down, uninterupted, on what had been Aaron Hollis as he lay motionless at his feet. There was a powder-burned hole in the butternut shirt, and only a slender thread of blood trickled into the dirt-grimed cracks between the planks. The body was twisted sideways, in one of those grotesque attitudes with which a sudden summons so frequently robs the greatest phenomenon of all its rightful dignity. The sun was gilding the roadside clods and burnishing the greens of the treetops. The breeze was harping sleepily among the branches, and several geese stalked pompously along the creek's edge. On the top of the stockade a gray squirrel, sole witness to the tragedy, rose on his haunches, fluffed his brush, and then, in a sudden leap of alarm, disappeared.

Samson turned to the darkened doorway. Inside was emptiness, except for the other body, which had crumpled forward and face down across the counter. A glance showed that Jesse Purry would no more fight back the coming of death. He was quite unarmed. Behind his spent body ranged shelves of general merchandise. Boxes of sardines and cans of peaches were lined in homely array above him. His lifeless hand rested as though hung out in an oratorical gesture on a bolt of blue calico.

Samson paused only for a momentary survey. His score was clean. He would not again have to agonize over the dilemma of old ethics and new. Tomorrow the word would spread like wildfire along Misery and Crippleish that Samson South was back and that his coming had been signified by these two deaths. The fact that he was responsible for only one—and that in self-defense—would not matter. They would prefer to believe that he had invaded the store and killed Purry and that Hollis had fallen in his master's defense at the threshold. Samson went out, still meeting no one, and continued his journey.

Dusk was falling when he hitched his horse in a clump of timber, and, lifting his saddlebags, began climbing to a cabin that sat back in a thicketed cove. He was now well within South territory and the need of masquerade had ended.

The cabin had not for years been occupied. Its roof was leaning askew under rotting shingles. The doorstep was ivy-covered, and the stones of the hearth were broken. But it lay well hidden and would serve his purposes.

Shortly, a candle flickered inside, before a small hand mirror. Scissors and safety razor were for a while busy. The man who entered in impeccable clothes emerged fifteen minutes later—transformed. There appeared under the rising June crescent a smooth-faced native, clad in stained store-clothes, with rough woolen socks showing at his brogan tops, and a battered felt hat drawn over his face. No one who had known the Samson South of four years ago would fail to recognize him now. And the strangest part, he told himself, was that he felt the old Samson. He no longer doubted his courage. He had come home, and his conscience was once more clear.

The mountain roads and the mountain sides themselves were sweetly silent. Moon mist engulfed the flats in a lake of dreams, and as the livery-stable horse halted to pant at the top of the final ridge, he could see below him his destination.

The smaller knobs rose like little islands out of the vapor, and yonder, catching the moonlight like scraps of gray paper, were two roofs—that of his uncle's house and that of the Widow Miller.

At a point where a hand bridge crossed the skirting creek, the boy dismounted. Ahead of him lay the stile where he had said good-by to Sally. The place was dark, and the chimney smokeless, but, as he came nearer, holding the shadows of the trees, he saw one sliver of light at the bottom of a solid shutter; the shutter of Sally's room. Yet, for a while, Samson stopped there, looking and making no sound. He stood at his Rubicon—and behind him lay all the glitter and culture of that other world, a world that had been good to him.

That was to Samson South one of those pregnant and portentous moments with which life sometimes punctuates its turning points. At such times all the set and solidified strata that go into the building of a man's nature may be upturned and rearranged. So the layers of a mountain chain and a continent that have for centuries remained steadfast may break and alter under the stirring of earthquake or volcano, dropping heights under water and throwing new ranges above the sea.

There was passing before his eyes as he stood there, pausing, a panorama much vaster than any he had been able to conceive when last he stood there. He was seeing in review the old life and the new, lurid with contrasts, and, as the pictures of things thousands of miles away rose before his eyes as clearly as the series backbone of the ridges, he was comparing and settling for all time the actual values and proportions of the things in his life.

He saw the streets of Paris and New York, brilliant under their strings of opalescent lights; the Champs Elysees ran its smooth, tree-trimmed parquetry from the Place de Concorde to the Arc de Triomphe, and the chatter and music of its cafes rang in his ears. The ivory spaces of Rome, from the Pincian hill, where his fancy saw almond trees in bloom, to the Piazza Venezia, spread their eternal story before his imagination. He saw "buses and hansom cabs" string through the mud and fog of London and the endless not-pourri of Manhattan. All the things that the outside world had to offer; all that had ever stirred his pulses to a worship of the beautiful, the harmonious, the excellent, rose in exact value. Then he saw again the sunrise as it would be tomorrow morning over these ragged hills. He saw the mist rise and grow wispy-like, and the disk of the sun gain color, and all the miracles of cannoning tempest and caressing palm—and, though he had come back to fight, a wonderful peace settled over him, for he knew that, if he must choose these, his native hills, or all the rest, he would forego all the rest. And Sally—Would she be changed? His heart was hammering wildly now. Sally had remained loyal. It was a miracle, but it was the one thing that counted. He was going to her, and nothing else mattered.

He lifted his head and sent out a long, clear whippoorwill call, which quavered on the night much like the other calls in the black hills around him. After a moment he went nearer, in the shadow of a poplar, and repeated the call.

Then the cabin door opened. Its jamb framed a patch of yellow candle light, and, at the center, a slender silhouetted figure, in a fluttering, eager attitude of uncertainty. The figure turned slightly to one side, and, as it did so, the man saw clasped in her right hand the rifle, which had been his mission, hequeathed to her in trust. She hesitated, and the man, invisible in the shadow, once more imitated the bird note, but this time it was so low and soft that it seemed the voice of a whippoorwill.

Then, with a sudden glad little cry, she came running with her old fleet grace down to the road.

Samson had vaulted the stile and stood in the full moonlight. As he saw her coming he stretched out his arms and his voice broke from his throat in a half-hoarse, passionate cry: "Sally!"

It was the only word he could have spoken just then, but it was all that was necessary. It told her everything. It was an outburst from a heart too full of emotion to grope after speech, the cry of a man for the One Woman who alone can call forth an infection more eloquent than phrases and poetry. And, as she came into his outstretched arms as straight and direct as a homing pigeon, they closed about her in a convulsive grip that held her straining to him, almost crushing her in the tempest of his emotion.

For a time there was no speech, but to each of them it seemed that their tumultuous heartbeating must sound above the night music, and the telegraphy of heartbeats tells enough. Later they would talk, but now, with a gloriously wild sense of being together, with a mutual intoxication of joy because all that they had dreamed was true, and all that they had feared was untrue, they stood there under the skies clasping each other—with the rifle between their breasts. Then as he held her close, he wondered that a shadow of doubt could ever have existed. He wondered if, except in some nightmare of hallucination, it had ever existed.

The flutter of her heart was like that of a rapturous bird, and the play of her breath on his face like the fragrance of the elder blossoms.

These were their stars twinkling overhead. These were their hills, and their moon was smiling on their tryst. He had gone and seen the world that lured him; he had met its difficulties and faced its puzzles. He had even felt his feet wandering at the last from the path that led back to her, and now, with her like a figure close held in his embrace, and her red-brown hair brushing his temples, he marveled how such an instant of doubt could have existed. He knew only that the silver of the moon and the kiss of the breeze and the clasp of her soft arms about his neck were all parts of one great miracle. And she, who had waited and almost despaired, not taking count of what she had suffered, felt her knees grow weak, and her head grow dizzy with sheer happiness, and wondered if it were not too marvelous to be true. And, looking very steadfastly into his eyes, she saw there the gleam that once had frightened her; the gleam that spoke of something stronger and more compelling than his love. It no longer frightened her, but made her soul sing, though it was more intense than it had ever been before, for now she knew that it was she herself who brought it to his pupils—and that nothing would ever be stronger.

But they had much to say to each other, and, finally, Samson broke the silence.

"Did ye think I wasn't a-coming back, Sally?" he questioned, softly. At that moment he had no realization that his tongue had ever fashioned smoother phrases. And she, too, who had been making war on crude idioms, forgot, as she answered: "Ye done said ye was comin'." Then she added a happy lie: "I knowed plumb shore ye'd do hit."

After a while she drew away and said, slowly: "Samson, I've done kept the old rifle-gun ready fer ye. Ye said ye'd need it bad when ye come back, an' I've took care of it."

She stood there holding it, and her voice dropped almost to a whisper as she added: "It's been a lot of comfort to me sometimes, because it was your'n. I knew if ye stopped keerin' fer me ye wouldn't let me keep it—an' as long as I had it—I—" She broke off, and the fingers of one hand touched the weapon caressingly.

The man knew many things now that he had not known when he said good-by. He recognized in the very gesture with which she stroked the old walnut stock the pathetic heart-hunger of a nature which had been denied the fulfillment of its strength, and which had been bestowing on an inanimate object something that might almost have been the stirring of the mother instinct for a child. Now, thank God, her life should never lack anything that a flood-tide of love could bring to it. He bent his head in a mute sort of reverence.

After a long while they found time for the less wonderful things.

Dinner Stories

An old negro was taken ill and called in a physician of his own race to prescribe for him; but the old man did not seem to improve and eventually a white physician was summoned. Soon after his arrival, the new doctor felt the old man's pulse for a moment and then examined his tongue.

"Did your other doctor take your temperature?" he asked.

"I don't know, boss," the sick man answered feebly. "I hain't missed anything but my watch as yet."

"Then you refuse me?" he asked dramatically.

"I do, John," answered the maiden. "Is it because I have no fortune?"

"Not at all."

"Is it my looks?"

"Yes—yes. I have just been reading that people who marry grow to look like each other, and although I love you, John, I-I really don't think I could stand to look like you."

"You silly girl!" he exclaimed. "Maybe it will be I who will grow to look like you."

"Oh, John," she said joyously, "I never thought of that. I'm sure it would be great for us to look like each other, wouldn't it? Won't you please forgive me?"

"You never see Hicks and his wife together anywhere."

"I have. Once."

"Where?"

"At their wedding."

The Duke's Operation.

The delicate operation of separating the French Siamese twins, which has just been successfully performed, recalls Lord Roughton's story of a duke of St. Albans who went to inspect the original Siamese twins. The tale is retold in the London Express. The duke looked at the two boys, and then turned to their showman. "Are they brothers?" he asked. The showman's reply has not been preserved.

CONFUSION OF RACES IN BALKAN REGIONS

Country Full of Constant Religious and Racial Struggles Hinders Country's Advancement.

Washington, Dec. 14.—Some of the leading characteristics of the Balkan region, that part of the world which is a confusion of races, languages, customs, nations, religions, and traditions has caused to be the centuries-long theatre of seething, incessant religious and racial struggles, are described in a statement given to the press today by the National Geographic Society. It says:

Many people of many minds meet on the fringe between the east and the west, the Balkan peninsula, and each of these peoples clings tenaciously to its language, its traditions, its religion, and to the manners and ways of its kind. Several families of the Slavonic people, each with its own tongue and patriotism, are there. The Turks, the Greeks, and a sprinkling of Germans, together with many fragmentary types of peoples, from west and east, survivors of nations and tribes of yesterday's history, add to the kaleidoscopic bewilderment. The Balkan lands are a confusion of such an ordinary master of tongues may hope to go through the aid of an occasional interpreter and much use of sign language.

In the hearts of most of these peoples, no matter how small their land or how little the world may know of them, there is kept alive a fiery consciousness of their nationality. The Montenegrins, for instance, are a nation of their small bowl of a country among the mountains as is the citizen of our own United States, the difference being, where any, that the Montenegrins are a nation of much more of their nationality and its advantages than does the average American. With the sharp racial, tribal and linguistic divisions of the Balkans, the various Protestant, Catholic, and Mohammedan faiths have served to segregate these people from one another.

All the energy, destruction and clamor which the friction between its many contrary types of people and ideals has occasioned, has retarded the development of the Balkan peninsula so that it is some generations behind the achievements of the west, and the traveler in the byways of this country has had to put up with those same inconveniences which he would encounter in undeveloped Asia. The roads in the Balkans are bad, in most cases mere cattle and footpaths. The villages are squalid, ill-kept, without improvements, without comforts, without conveniences. The means of transportation are uncertain; the mules are undependable, the railway trains are capricious, and the move according to the temper of their captains and the moods of their engineers, while the treacherous roads make horse and cart a risky adventure. Furthermore, the law and order of much of the Balkan lands is at best a matter of considerable uncertainty.

The Balkan peninsula has been war-torn for nineteen hundred years or more. War became a continuous experience of the people, with the coming of the Romans, and, under the 1,000 years of the rule of Byzantium, when this east Roman empire did reach its outward days for Christendom until its destruction by the Turk, the Balkan peoples definitely took the place which they hold today, that of being a buffer people between an unpopulated and nomadic Asia on the west and the east, they have been everlastingly employed with fighting both the east and the west or among themselves, which has helped to make the Balkan peninsula the poorest stretch of land in Europe.
